5.0 Book description

5.1 Content: We need to know as much as possible about the proposed structure and contents of the book. You should state clearly how you plan to present the topics. Consider these questions as you write your proposal: Why does a book need to be written about your topic? What themes, ideas and concepts will you develop? How does your proposed book differ from others in your subject area? Does your book project have any unique focus or features? What is the existing competition for your book? Please give details of relevant titles/authors. Do you teach a course on which the book is based? How long will the book be (in words or double-spaced pages)? Will the book complement any other publications by the CBS Press? How does this work fit into the CBS mission of promoting new research in Basque Studies? In what sense is this work original? To which of the CBS Series (see our web site, under “publications,” for more information) are you proposing your work and why do you think it best fits in that particular series? Is the text in English, or do you own the copyright permission to have your text translated into English? Are you willing to pay for a professional index (approximately $1,500)? Do you have any ideas for any individuals, institutions, organizations, or government offices that may help pay for the translation costs?

Please give a list of chapters, with a few paragraphs relating to each one. You may be asked to submit a sample chapter.

5.2 Rationale and timescale: What are your reasons for writing the book? What is its proposed length? What is your intended completion date?

6.0 Readership

6.1 Readership: For whom is the book being written? (e.g., academic specialists, professionals in your field, undergraduates, graduate students, scholars and professionals in disciplines other than your own)

6.2 Level: Into which category will your book fit? (e.g., monograph, textbook, multi-authored work, reference book, autobiography or memoir)
